Training the Whole Horse[®] Empowers Kids & Teens with Life Skills

Missy Wryn's Training the Whole Horse[®] methods and techniques are rapidly spreading amongst parents as awareness that working with horses is not just about riding. "When working with and around horses", Missy describes "you learn life skills such as healthy boundaries, body and emotional awareness along with presence of mind and focus. When a child is empowered to move a 1200 lb animal with just a look and a point of their finger the recognition of their ability without force or use of pain is dynamic."

Training the Whole Horse[®] is founded on the principal of invoking the horse's instinct, without the use of fear or pain. The Four Core Emotional Concerns that humans and horses share bring awareness to the handler that the horse can make conscious choices without being forced while balancing leadership, which the horse is genetically wired to require, and relationship that both the horse and the handler desire. Training the Whole Horse[®] is taught by Missy Wryn at expos and clinics plus her training DVDs and MP3 audio downloads.
